Abstract

System and method of providing authentication of files downloaded from a source to an embedded system are described. The files or other digital data is combined with a header that includes target state information. The target state information is typically identification information such as target address or data revision levels. The embedded system verifies the target state information before uploading the files or digital data. The header may also include a digital signature as a further authentication measure.